THIEVES TAKE SAFE, $7,000

Columbus Bandits Prove Bold; Marysville Filling Station Safe Taken.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9 — Thieves who risked discovery by boldly carrying away a heavy safe from the store of the Gilbert Shoe Company here today obtained $7,000 which had been deposited in the vault over the weekend.

The robbery was committed some time before the opening of the store this morning. H. D. Rosendahl, manager, told police. The safe and its contents were in the store last night, he said.

Rosendahl discovered the loss when he entered the store and saw a rear window open.

WEIGHED 400 LBS.

The safe weighed at least 400 pounds and police worked on the theory that several men had been engaged in the theft, using a truck to cart away their loot.

Merchandise and cash registers were left untouched. The cash contained in the safe represented the Saturday receipts of the store. Rosendahl was unable to determine whether the bulky strongbox had been lifted through the window used for making an entrance or through a rear door.

THREE ALARMS KEEP FIREMEN AT WORK HERE

Goeller Broom Factory, Weaver Cadillac and Shed Fire Are Reported

DAMAGE IS LITTLE

Wheel on Huge Pumper Hinders Firefighters

(BULLETIN)

The Nash coupe of Miss Katherine Mead, Logan-st, driven by Arthur Palm, was badly damaged by fire at 2:15 p. m., Monday. Firemen believe the blaze started from an overflowing vacuum tank. The car was north of this city when it caught fire.

Circleville's fire department was kept scampering through city streets Sunday when three fire alarms were turned in.

The first call came at 6 a. m., when the alarm at the Goeller broom factory, Clinton-st, began to ring. Memories of the disaster which burned the factory to the ground several years ago returned to residents of that district but when firemen gained entrance to the building it was learned that water leaking from the sprinkler system of the plant had caused the alarm to ring.

CADILLAC BURNS

The second call came at 1:30 p. m., when the Cadillac sedan of W. J. Weaver, S. Court-st, became afire while parked in front of the Weaver residence. It is thought a short circuit caused the blaze.

Firemen hurried to the scene and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze after considerable damage had been done. All the wiring on the car was burned out and it is though the carburetor was damaged beyond repair by the intense heat. Paint on the hood of the car was also peeled off. The car was taken to the Schiear garage for repairs.

WHEEL IS BROKEN

It was at the Weaver fire that the huge pumper engine came very near being wrecked. While the truck was speeding to the scene of the blaze, Safety Director J. Wallace Crist who closely followed the truck observed that the rear left wheel was wabbling. He notified firemen as soon as they reached the Weaver fire. Had the fire been very far and a right turn necessary it is possible the wheel would have broken off and all equipment on the truck thrown on the ground with much damage ensuing.

The call at the home of Paul Betz on the Lancaster-pk, at 3:30 was answered with the old truck. A shed was burning there with little damage reported. It is not known how the fire started.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise was in Columbus Monday morning trying to obtain necessary repairs for the huge pumper engine.

Norris Attacks Hoover's Plans

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
Copyright 1931 by International News Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Voicing fresh opposition to administration policies, Senator George U. Norris, veteran insurgent leader, returned to the congressional wars today with a new insurgent program for the approaching session of Congress.

ANNOUNCES PLANS

On foreign affairs, Norris proposed a new condition for American adherence to the revised world court protocal. On domestic issues, he suggested a huge bond issue to provide work for the unemployed, opposed tax increases for the middle and poor classes, declared it was hopeless to expect a tariff revision and sought to sidetrack the prohibition question. In brief, he declared war on all the president's outstanding policies.

As for Mr. Hoover personally, Norris paved the way for an insurgent bolt to the Democratic presidential nominee next fall. Should the president be renominated by the Republicans. Norris led such a bolt against Hoover in 1928. It was apparent, he will not hesitate to lead a similar bolt next year.

CONDEMNS PROGRAM

AMERICAN TROOPS AT TIENTSIN

New Outbreak of Rioting Fears by Foreign Constabularies in China

CITY IS IN PANIC

Threat of Withdrawal From League Heard

PEIPING, Nov. 9.—Fearing a new outbreak of the Chinese rioting which resulted in numerous deaths and threw the population of Tientsin into a panic, heavy detachments of foreign troops and native constabulary patrolled the streets of that city tonight.

In a telephone conversation with International News Service at 6:15 p. m., Chang Huueh-Liang, mayor of Tientsin, reported that all was quiet but there were grave fears that the existing tension would result in new outbreaks.

TROOPS READY

Chinese officials reiterated their charges that the rioting was staged by Japanese and subsidized by Japanese funds, while Japanese authorities characterized the outbreak as a Chinese rebellion. American troops of the 15th Infantry stationed at Tientsin, as well as Italian, Japanese and French troops guarded the foreign concessions.

With but one week remaining before the date set by the League of Nations council for evacuation of Japanese troops and peaceful settlement of the Manchurian crisis, Sino-Japanese tension was seriously aggravated today by bloody rioting in Tientsin, the gateway to Peiping, China.

While order was temporarily restored at 6:15 p. m. Chinese time, fears were felt of a new outbreak, causing United States and other foreign troops to stand guard over foreign concessions. Japanese officials characterized the rioting as a Chinese rebellion, while Chinese authorities alleged the rioters were subsidized by Japanese funds.

On northern Manchurian front, Chinese and Japanese troops went into action again at the Nonni river bridgehead, the Chinese having 8,300 men in the field against 1,000 Japanese.

RUSSIANS HELP

The Japanese war office announced it had obtained confessions from two captured officers of General Ma Chan-Shan's Tsitsihar army that the Chinese troops were being assisted by 500 Russian soldiers and that 100 Russian calvarymen were directing the defense of Tsitsihar. New Soviet concessions were promised in exchange for Russian military aid, the war office alleged.

Reports that Japan might withdraw from the League of Nations because of the "impossible terms" demanded were revived by the influential Tokyo newspaper Ji Ji Shimpo.

Buckeyes Face Gopher Eleven In Homecoming

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9—An 11 year deadlock to break Ohio State meets Wisconsin at Madison on Saturday in the tenth game between the two universities The contest is also the main attraction of the annual Badger homecoming.

Wisconsin is one of the few schools the Buckeyes did not meet until they entered the Western Conference in 1913. From that time until 1920 games were continuous and resulted in four victories apiece.

From 1920 to 1930 there were no games between the two in football and last year's scoreless tie failed to break the deadlock. Complete scores for all games are as follows:

1913 Wisconsin 12, Ohio State 0.
1914 Wisconsin 8, Ohio State 6.
1915 Wisconsin 21, Ohio State 0.
1916 Ohio State 14, Wisconsin 13.
1917 Ohio State 16, Wisconsin 3.
1918 Wisconsin 14, Ohio State 3
1919 Ohio State 3, Wisconsin 0.
1920 Ohio State 12, Wisconsin 7.
1930 Ohio State 0, Wisconsin 0.

Other athletic relationship between these two institutions show a striking similarity to football. In basketball Wisconsin quintets have a decided advantage while Ohio State hold the edge in baseball Saturday's game will be broadcast over radio station WEAO, of Ohio State University, and WTAM, of Cleveland.

While the football squad is away the Buckeye cross country team will meet Indiana here Saturday in a dual meet. The Hoosiers are champions of the Western Conference and the meet will be the first one here this fall. The race will be over the new four-mile course here.

MERCHANTS TAKE GAME

Wib Adkins Covers Ball Back of Goal Line For Touchdown Against Weiners

A mix-up play behind the goal line with Wip Adkins, local center, eventually covering the ball for a touchdown, gave the Circleville Merchants a 6-0 victory over the German Weiners of Columbus at the latter place Sunday.

The touchdown came after Eve Merriman spiraled a beautiful kick out of bounds on the Weiner one yard line The Columbus captain tried to kick from behind the goalline and when a bad pass from center resulted he attempted a lateral pass to another back. The ball struck the ground, and just as the receiver picked it up Hill and Carl Wallace tackled him so hard that he fumbled and Adkins covered the ball. Merriman's dropkick for the extra point was wide.

Four times the locals were inside the Weiner five yard line during the game but lacked the punch to carry the leather over the goal. Play was in Columbus territory practically the entire game.

Wib Adkins played a great game at center for the Merchants smearing numerous Columbus plays before they were started.

Next Sunday the Merchants will travel to McArthur to meet the independents there.

The Merchant lineup was; Boyer, le; Goldsberry, lt; Rothman, lg; Adkins, c; Radcliff, rg, C. Wallace, rt; Parks, re; Merriman, qb; Robinson, lh; Hill, rh, R. Wallace, fb. Substitutes were Skinner for Radcliff, Davis for Hill; Hill for Rothman.

YALE-DARTMOUTH SHATTER MARK

NEW HAVEN. — The "track meet" which the Yale and Dartmouth lads put on in Yale Bowl, October 31, in lieu of a football struggle, hung up some all-time records in the matter of a traveling pigskin.

Here are the figures involved in that 33-33 tie, showing the total yardage gained by both teams in devious ways:

By punts	1080 yards
By runback of punts ..	160 yards
By runback of kick-offs	325 yards
By rushing	301 yards
By forward passes ..	290 yards
By penalties	171 yards

The dizzy total is 2427.

Deduct the punts and the penalties, and the net sum is about 1200 yards. That represents 12 touchdowns. Just to convince the onlookers that they weren't making many useless gestures while on the premises, the boys did scamper along for a total of 9 touchdowns and added two placement goals to the most bizarre football game of modern times.

CHAPMAN'S LEGS ARE HIS FORTUNE

NEW YORK. — A beautiful pair of legs have been the meal ticket of many Follies girl, and a pair of legs, strongly built, but hardly beautiful, is the main reason why Ben Chapman of the Yankees is being cited for a material rise in salary next season.

A rookie in the spring, Chapman became a sensation by baseball stealing. He came close to equaling Ty Cobb's mark during the 1931 season, and proved to be one of the greatest of drawing cards.

"Most ballplayers," said a member of the Yankee squad after Chapman had hung up a total of 61 stolen bases during the year, "have to be all-around men to be successful in the big time. They have to have experience, skill and batting ability. Ben made up for those lacks by using his keen brain, his daring, and his whirling legs, and now he's a top-sergeant in baldom."

I have never advocated war except as a means of peace. Grant.

Peace is the proper result of the Christian temper. Bishop Patrick.

The war that will end war will not be fought with guns.

ROOKIE CLUB BATS .280 DURING YEAR

NEW YORK. — The National League rookie crop of 1931 produced at least one full team boasting a batting average of .280, a percentage better than that attained by either Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh or Boston. In addition, two yearling pitchers, Derringer and Berly between them won twenty-five games and lost sixteen.

The American league rookie array, although playing with the livelier ball, compiled a batting average of only .254. To offset this weakness with the stick, however, the junior circuit produced the most efficient young twirler to come up in years in Vernon Gomez, who wno 21 games and lost 9 for the second place New York Yankees.

The outstanding slugger of the lot would appear to be Joe Vosmik, of the Cleveland Indians, who playing as a regular, batted .320. But the thunder of this young Ohio sandlotter was stolen almost completely during the World Series by John "Pepper" Martin, fleet center fielder of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals. During the regular season, however, the "Oklahoma Simoon" who almost single handed put Connie Mack's baseball machine to rout, batted only 300.

Five great enemies of peace inhabit with us-avarice, ambition, envy, anger and pride: if these were to be banished, we should infallibly enjoy perpetual peace.

GRANGE TEAM BEATS SPARTS

Portsmouth Gridders Now Almost Out of Running For National Pro Title.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9—The Spartans from Portsmouth, who had won seven consecutives games in the National Professional League to make the early championship pace with the Green Bay Packers, today were sent to their second defeat of the year at Wrigley Field by the Chicago Bears

In defeating the Spartans, 9 to 6, before 25,000, the majority of whom were women, the Bears also snapped their own two-games list of setbacks, which included a 13 to 12 licking by Philadelphia and last week's loss to the champion Packers.

Portsmouth is coached by Potsy Clark, former Illinois star, and the team played a steady defensive battle, which produced another thrilling game. While the first half ended without either team scoring, yet each team threatened.

The Spartan's touchdown was the result of two successful forward passes in the fourth quarter. The first from Glenn Presnell to Bill McKalip, left end, was good for 25 yards and put the ball on the Bear's 47-yard line. Shortly after Presnell passed again, 30 yards down the field. Molesworth attempted to intercept the ball but deflected it into McKalip's hands and he ran for the touchdown Presnell's place kick for the point was wide.

Statistics on first downs show the Bears made nine, all on running plays. The Spartans had six first downs by running, one by passing and one by penalty. The line-up:

FESLER SAYS OHIO CAUSED OWN BREAKS

'Old Zip' Missing From State Team But Tough Contests Had Taken Toll.

BY WESLEY FESLER
(Written Expressly for International News Service and The Herald.)

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9—Here's a paradox for you

A listless eleven beat a team of scrappers in the Ohio State-Navy game here Saturday

Although they won, 20 to 0, the Buckeyes did not have the "old zip" Saturday, and the Navy boys outfought them throughout the game.

As I see it, the explanation is that the Navy had been pointing for this game all season

A week ago Saturday against West Virginia Wesleyan, Kirn and Tschirgi did not even play in the first 25 minutes of the game for Navy, and when they did get in, it was not together

Ohio State, however, was not able to point for Navy because of the hard games they had just before, Vanderbilt, Michigan, Northwestern and Indiana. This gave the Navy a bigger advantage than most folks think.

Even with their listlessness, I believe the Ohioans were the more powerful. Ohio's touchdowns came from what a lot of people believe were lucky breaks, but I believe they are wrong

State Newsmen Plan To Gather

COLUMBUS, O.—Plans for the fourth annual Ohio Journalism Hall of Fame dinner are announced at Ohio State University. At the dinner, to be held Friday evening, Nov. 20, on the campus, the names of Charles F. Browne (Artemus Ward), John Brough, and Warren G. Harding will be formally added to the Hall of Fame roster

The career of the late President Harding as an Ohio newspaper editor and publisher for nearly 40 years will be described by George H. Van Fleet, of the Marion Star. Mr. Van Fleet was long associated with the late president on The Star.

The journalistic service of John Brough, one of Ohio's, Civil War governors, and at one time co-publisher of The Cincinnati Enquirer, will be discussed by W F Wiley, general manager of The Enquirer. The life of Charles Browne who won international fame under the pen name of Artemus Ward will be traced by W. G Vorpe, Sunday editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, on whose staff the humorist was at one time.

Prof. Joseph S. Myers, of the school of journalism, will preside at the dinner. A response for the Ohio press will be given by Granville Barrere, Hillsboro, as president of the Ohio Newspaper Association. There will also be greetings from Governor George White and President G W. Rightmire.

EXPLAINS HOW TO COOK CHEAP CUTS

Substantial savings can be made in meat bills by purchasing the less expensive meat cuts, according to R. O. Roth of the department of animal husbandry at the Ohio State University.

The beef hind quarter furnishes such economical cuts as the rump, round, flank and shank. The rump, he says, may be cut into steaks or made into a delicious boned, rolled, and tied roast. If a steak is preferred, sear it on both sides in a sizzling hot, heavy frying pan. Then reduce the temperature and cook to the desired stage.

In cooking the roast, he suggests it be seared in the oven Chunks of beef fat are then put on top of the roast which is allowed to simmer on a rack until tender. From two and a half to three hours of cooking are required. Served on a hot platter with buttered carrots and stuffed onions such a dish challenges the best of the more expensive cuts. Ways of serving the round are similar to those used for the rump.

Shanks are good to use in soups and flanks may be used as steaks, in stews, or baked with vegetables, Roth believes.

Forequarters of beef furnish the inexpensive chuck, neck, plate, and shank. Chucks may be used as steaks or pot roasts and are second to none of the carcass cuts in flavor. Made boneless and rolled, pot roasts may be used without hesitancy. Necks may be used in soups and stews. When ground the meat may be molded into patties, surrounded with a slice of bacon, and broiled.

BRUSH LAND FIRE CALLED ILLEGAL

Having determined after a thorough investigation that rabbits, pheasants and other game, as well as fur-bearing animals are sometimes taken with the aid of fire through the burning of weeds, flags, marsh woodland and other game cover, at or around Lake St. Mary's, Indian Lake, Lake Erie marshes and other game areas within the state of Ohio, and that the burning of these game lands not only destroys large areas of food cover and natural habitat, but also causes unwarranted depletion of wild life by suffocation and fire, the conservation council of Ohio has issued the following order:

"That commencing on and after Sept. 25, 1931, and for a period of five years thereafter no fire shall be started in or near woods, flag, marsh woodland or any game cover or territory used for hunting in the state of Ohio for the purpose of taking or aiding in the taking or hunting of game, game birds, wild life, or fur-bearing animals;

"And it is further ordered that no game, game bird life or fur-bearing animals shall be taken at any time within the state of Ohio near or within one hundred and fifty yards of any burning woods, flag, marsh, woodlands or other game cover in any territory over which the division of conservation has jurisdiction."

An investigation having determined that soft-shelled and snapping turtles are in danger of depletion and extermination, and require additional protection, the council has ordered

"That for a period of five years from the last day of January, 1932, all dates inclusive, it shall be unlawful for a person to take soft-shelled turtles and snapping turtles for sale, anywhere in Ohio, except soft-shelled turtles and snapping turtles taken in Lake Erie, and in all counties bordering on Lake Erie, where they may be sold. A purchaser of such turtles must be able to show by the original invoice signed by the shipper that such turtles were legally taken in Lake Erie or in a county or counties bordering on Lake Erie, or that such turtles were legally taken and shipped from out the state, or furnished satisfactory proof that such turtles were otherwise legally taken."

NEWS REPORT FROM THE OHIO BUREAU OF MOTOR VEHICLES

SHIFTING THE BURDEN

Each county, under the new motor vehicle law, effective December 31, 1931, will get the same amount as under the present law for highways, plus its share of the entire increased revenue, the Ohio Bureau of Motor Vehicles declares in a recent report. These funds are likewise in addition to the county and township's shares of the gasoline tax revenues.

Under this new act, in 1932 and 1933, there shall be paid into the several county and township funds, amounts which would have been produced by the rates of taxation in 1930 upon personal property, such as motor vehicles household goods and furnishings, pianos and musical instruments, moneys, credits, investments in stocks, bonds, joint stock companies or otherwise, and shares of bank stock or capital employed in banking These items are not called for in individual tax returns under the new law The increased auto licenses make up for these former sources of revenue. Many householders who have conscientiously paid personal taxes will find the increase in auto license rates an actual reduction of their total taxes.

CARELESS DRIVING

Safety inspection reports to the Bureau of Motor Vehicles indicate that the average municipal motorist daily violates one or more traffic laws

To illustrate the chances for slipups, unconscious and otherwise, and what it would cost in fines if all offenses were caught, the actions of Mr Average Driver are related. He starts [illegible] in the morning in a great hurry His brakes are not [illegible] and [illegible] car at all times [illegible] of Passing around a corner recklessly he does not keep to the right edge all the way around Darts through at a point on the right of the vehicle ahead of passing on the left does not first signal, and pulls over to the right before clear of the overtaken vehicle Passes to the left in passing street car. Backs the car without giving ample warning Fails to signal before turning stopping or changing course, in a way visible outside the vehicle.

In making a left turn he does not pass to the right of and beyond the center of the intersection before turning. Makes stop at road side not facing in the direction of travel. Also with right wheels not within one foot of the curb. At an intersection, fails to accede to right of way of vehicle approaching from the right.

View to rear and both sides by mirror or otherwise, not clear and unobstructed. Dashes out into intersection against traffic light and proceeds as the best way out of misjudgment.

An offender may be fined up to $25 00 for any one of the above violations, first offense, and up to $100 00 on second offense. There are laws relating to speeding, head-light requirements and stopping for school busses, that come in for too frequent violation, say the Inspectors

Wheat may be substituted for corn in the dairy ration and good results obtained provided not more than 30 per cent of the ration is supplied by this inexpensive grain say dairy extension specialists in the department of animal husbandry at the Ohio State University

The following rations, they state, make good combinations to feed with silage and alfalfa if wheat and soybeans are available Corn and cob meal 300 pounds, wheat 200 pounds oats 100 pounds, and soybeans 100 pounds Their second suggestion is corn and cob meal 400 pounds ground wheat 300 pounds oats 200 pounds cottonseed meal 100 pounds and soybeans 100 pounds Still another ration consists of 300 pounds of corn and cob meal 200 pounds of wheat 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran and 100 pounds cottonseed meal

It is best to vary the amount of protein in the grain ration with the roughage available With clover and silage 50 to 100 pounds of high protein feeds such as cottonseed meal linseed oil meal soybean oil meal, gluten, etc should be purchased With mixed hay, 100 to 150 pounds of high protein feed are best added to the rations and if timothy hay and silage are fed it is well to use from 150 to 250 pounds of high protein feeds with the rations.

Jefferson on Education

THOMAS Jefferson one of the founders of the University of Virginia, in setting forth the principles on which the institution was founded, said "A state university should be open to any man desiring to improve his mind." This is a clear and consise statement, its very succinctness adding to its weight. Considered carefully, it will be found to contain the essense of democracy.

A number of speakers and writers, some of them professional educators, have recently advocated widely divergent schemes for making admission to state institutions of learning difficult for poor youths One goes so far as to suggest that the elimination of this class, through excessive cost, would produce a higher type of college graduate "relieve congestion in the institutions" and prevent "Waste of time and energy cost in educationg a group unfit for education of the higher plane."

This line of though, confined, fortunately, to a short-sighted few s perhaps the most undemocratic and un-American that the present era of radical thinking has produced There will never be too many educated men and women Brains do not spring from wealth and wealth therefore, cannot be used as the guage of a man's fitness for education The state of a youth's purse is not indication of the capacity for his brain

This has been demonstrated under our democratic system of education time and time again Jefferson's principle is as right as it was in his time

Farm Outlook Brightens

FIRST to feel the depression were the farmers. They had had years of it before industrial prosperity had reached its peak. Those who had paid inflated war prices for land did not long keep their heads above water when food prices dropped after the war. Government loans and other forms of farm relief saved few.

Agriculture collapsed first but it is showing healthy signs of being the first to recover. Just when almost all hope for the American farmer had been abandoned grain crops fail in several foreign countries, sending American prices up at a dizzy pace. If the European shortage is equal to the American surplus, the latter will be unloaded at a good profit.

When the upturn in grain prices came it was estimited that 400,000,000 bushels of wheat were in warehouses in the United States. If all or nearly all of that vast surplus is still in the hands of the farmers who raised it, the grain belt is flirting with prosperity. If speculators have gobbled it all up at 25 cents, more wealth will be concentrated among a few. Should it develop that the government's farm relief program has made it possible for the farmers to hold their products for more favorable prices, the past failures of that program will be forgotten. Agriculture's weakness in the past was that it could not afford to wait after the harvest until top prices prevailed.

Dollar wheat is now predicted. Correspondingly high prices for other grains are anticipated. Manufacturers, merchants, bank and all classes of labor have a stake in this strike of good fortune for the farmers. All that is needed to start the farmer on a spending spree is an earning spree. They have had neither for nearly a decade.

Disarament Truce

THE prohibitionists took advantage of the war fever to enact the eighteenth amendment. The anti-prohibitionists are using the depression to agiate for repeal or modification. If the disarmament advocates are wide awake they will make the most of the present poverty of national treasuries. They have never before had such an opportunity.

Apparently opportunity's knock has been heard. The league of Nations has proposed a year's armament truce, and since none of the powers has refused to participate the holiday may be considered effective.

This truce, which was originally proposed by Italy's foreign minister, is nothing revolutionary. It provides that within the year the governments will not increase their budgets for land forces, will not lay down new naval craft and will not increase the number of their fighting aircraft.

It is only a gentlemen's agreement but there is little possibility of a breach of faith this year. When the treasury is empty and the taxpayers have been shaken down for their last pennies the most militant and aggressive government finds it easy to sign disarmament treaties. The real test will come when such luxuries as large navies and standing armies can again be afforded without putting the national budget in the red.

World leaders sincere in their protestations for peace and disarmament should make the most of this opportunity. If they do not get the militaristic countries to sign on the dotted lines before prosperity returns, their chances for materially reducing world armaments before another depression will be mighty slim.

USE VACUUM CLEANER TO FIND LOST GOLF BALLS

EUGENE, Oregon.—The search for golf balls lost in the autumnal leaves will no longer be a bugbear to golfers here. A giant vacuum sweeper, four feet wide, that picks up leaves and paper from the fairways has been invented by William Crisp and George L. Babcock of the Oakway Public Golf Course at Eugene. Utilizing the principle of the ordinary household cleaner the unique machine is able to clear the debris from approximately nine fairways a day.

An ordinary "planer blower" is used to furnish the suction. The leaves are then blown through a long pipe into a cage built on the back of a truck, which serves also to haul the blower. An old automobile motor mounted on a trailer furnishes the power. Although the blower exerts a strong suction it can be regulated so that it will merely pick up the leaves and leave golf balls on the grass.

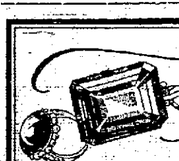
UNOFFICIAL OBSERVERS (ARMISTIC DAY)

"The CZARINA'S RUBIES"



by Sidney Warwick

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST

Frank Severn, after an attempt to retrieve the lost Czarina Rubies for the girl to whom they rightfully belong, returns to England from Russia in desperate fear. His friend, Jim Wynter and his lawyer Felix Sant, rush to Severn's remote country place to help him, but Severn already has been kidnaped and carried away in an automobile in the night.

Wynter returns to London and, to fulfill a promise, attends a roulette party.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER VIII

"I've had something on passe every time, Jim," Milly told him. "All the big numbers are coming up tonight. There you are—29. That's another win," she added breathlessly, as the slowing ivory ball dropped into its number slot.

A big, florid man, whose name was Malin, rose disgustedly from his chair.

"I don't believe the bally wheel's true," he murmured to Wynter. "Oh, not Hildren's fault—I don't mean that, but I'll swear the infernal thing's warped. I've backed 23 every time tonight and it hasn't come up once."

PERVERSITY

Malin looked in a decidedly evil humor. The younger man grinned unsympathetically. He had no particular use for bad losers. Besides Malin had more money than was good for him. Time he learned to be a sportsman and lose decently.

Again the ball was spun. Then: "Twenty-three—rouge—passe," announced Hildren.

"Well, I'm damned!" broke out Lester Malin explosively. "If that isn't the limit. The first time I don't stake 23 turns up."

But Jim Wynter hardly heard. He was staring as if startled at a girl in black and mauve whose face had flashed out unexpectedly from among the little crowd 'round the roulette table—and it was not her arresting beauty alone that drew his sudden, intent gaze, though she was easily the most striking looking woman there, vivid with a dark, delicate loveliness that somehow suggested an un-English strain in her blood. She seemed to hold aloof from the general talk and laughter and there was a strained look in her face, as though she were not playing entirely for the fun of the thing.

Her luck had been clean out, spin after spin.

That girl whom he had last seen more than two years ago in New York, when her name had flashed out in a glitter of white light from the facade of a great pleasure palace on Broadway . . . how strange the coincidence that had brought them together again tonight, so closely following upon Severn's disappearance—Katharine Faring!

The sight of this girl's face, that he had last seen some 3,000 odd miles away from England, had brought Jim Wynter up with a quick, eager thrill. How amazing a chance that he should have run across Katharine Faring now, so closely upon that bewildering mystery about the man to whom he owed their introduction in New York more than two years ago.

Once, as if suddenly conscious of his gaze, the girl glanced up the table in Wynter's direction. For a moment her eyes seemed to linger arrested, and a faintly puzzled look crept into them as if something in the man's face struck her as vaguely familiar. Then almost at once, the game absorbed her again.

She was having no luck at all, as Wynter saw as he stood watching the play. There was more than the hint of a strained look in her face, as if the game had gone steadily against her from the moment she had sat down at the table. Four times running she backed red and each time, with monotonous persistence, black came up. Then, as if on a sudden impulse, she increased her stake from ten shillings to a pound, still backing red, and once again her stake was swept away.

DESPERATION

The little heap of paper money on the table by her side had melted away. From her brocade handbag the girl drew out very slowly a tiny wad of notes. She bit her lip as once again her stake was raked in with casual cheerfulness by Hildren.

Despite her efforts at composure her face could not hide that deepening strained look. In the eyes of some of the players greed flared like a naphtha lamp; but it was not that in hers—something more like sheer desperation, as it seemed to Wynter.

And yet how could the winning or losing of a handful of Treasury notes really matter to that girl he remembered on the crest of the wave, one of fortune's favorites?

In Jim Wynter's mind was a sudden picture of a night of more than two years ago when Frank Severn had dragged him off to a great concert hall on Broadway—that of a girl with a violin who had played "Chanson Triste," the magic of her fingers setting free cascades of dancing silver notes that seemed to weave into their pattern of matchless melody joy and sorrow, hopes and dreams, so exquisite in their tenderness and feeling, so near to tears, that for moments after the last note had quivered into silence it was as though the great hushed house still held its breath.

The New York press had been full of this girl violinist, Russian on her mother's side, who had flashed into fame almost in a night. And not only her talents, her beauty . . . behind her triumphant progress was a story strange and dramatic enough to intrigue public interest still more in the personality of the rising star.

After knowing that poignant story Wynter had marveled less at the depth of feeling expressed in Katharine Faring's playing of "Chanson Triste."

When Severn had introduced them Wynter had half expected a certain disillusionment; the few celebrities he had met had proved distinctly disillusioning at close quarters. He need not have been afraid. Off the platform one would not have known that she was a celebrity—gay, charming, natural, so utterly unspoiled by success.

HURT

It was not easy to reconcile that memory picture with the figure in mauve and black bending with absorbed eyes over the roulette table. A little wrinkly frown had crept into Jim Wynter's face. He was far from a Puritan—but he suddenly hated the atmosphere of this place, hated to see the girl who had lived in his memory gambling feverishly with that strained, desperate look in her eyes—that somehow hurt him.

Suddenly she rose. The last of the little pile of notes by her side had been raked in by the dark, Mrs. Hildren murmured with the facile sympathy of long practice.

"Sure you won't go on? Such a pity to stop playing now and not give your luck a chance of retrieving itself. And I hate to think you've had such ghastly luck, my dear—I shan't be happy till you've won it all back."

"Oh, that's all right!" The tones and the little accompanying laugh sounded careless, but Wynter saw that the girl's lips quivered. "But there's no fighting against my luck tonight. I think I'll just watch the others."

Only for a moment or two Katharine Faring stood watching the play; then slipped away from the table.

Jim Wynter was about to move across to her when Malin intercepted her, to whisper something with a smile on the heavy, confident face that somehow made the other man yearn to kick him. She saw the girl shake her head very coldly and unsmilingly and turn away, leaving Malin with a frown like a thundercloud—which seemed to afford Wynter considerable satisfaction. Lester Malin was a man whom all the girls, pretty or plain, he felt should snub on principle.

And anyway it gave him his chance. He crossed over to her with his cheery, rather crooked smile—a smile that most women found far more attractive than a bushel of mere good looks to which, incidentally, this big man with the lazy, humorous gray eyes could lay no claim whatever.

"What have I done that you should cut me dead, Miss Faring?" Jim Wynter challenged gaily.

Not that Wynter was surprised Katharine should have forgotten him. They had only met once before, when Frank Severn had introduced them at that New York party given in honor of this rising star.

FORGOTTEN

"I feel I ought to know you," the girl said uncertainly; they had moved away from the babble of chatter 'round the roulette table. "But I'm afraid——"

She shook her head.

"Don't you remember a cheery party at Rumpelmayer's between two and three years ago?"

"Of course, I remember now," a gleam of recognition showed suddenly in her face. "You came with Frank Severn."

More than ever he was conscious of a change in her from that girl of years ago with her gay, laughing voice, her vivid, charming personality. Her voice seemed to have lost its old buoyant timbre, there was something in her eyes now very far from happiness or laughter.

She went on with a little faintly apologetic smile:

"I remember now quite distinctly and how Frank Severn told me you were one of his oldest friends . . . it's stupid of me not to recall your name."

It struck Wynter from her manner that Katharine could not have heard yet of Severn's disappearance. Of course, there had been nothing in the press that morning about that disquieting mystery and probably she had not seen the evening papers. It would be a shock to her when he told her the news; this girl and Severn had been such great friends in those New York days, he remembered.

"Oh, I'm Jim Wynter—though I'm not a bit surprised you want reminding of it!" he laughed. "Celebrities can't be expected to give a name to each of the small fry they're always meeting. Are you over in England professionally, Miss Faring? I'm just back myself from remote wilds in the Argentine and shockingly out of touch with everything. But, of course, you are triumphing all along the line?"

Relation of Eyestrain to General Ill Health

The Extra Nervous Energy Used to Aid Poor Vision Naturally Lessens the Store Needed to Carry on Other Functions of the Body, Says Authority.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A COMMON experience of those who are specializing in eye examinations is to be told, "My eyesight is perfect. Certainly I don't need glasses, because I can see everything."

Dr. Copeland

The fact is, this is the person who may be in greater need of lenses than one who has very defective sight. Naturally you will ask, "How can this be?"

If one has such defective vision that he just cannot see, of course he won't try, and therefore there is no strain. But if one has a quality of vision which makes it possible by an effort, even though that effort is unconsciously made, of course, he will go on using his eyes, flattering himself that these organs are normal because he can see even the finest type or the tiniest stitches.

The constant expenditure of such effort is damaging to the nervous system. It results in constant drainage of nerve energy. It tires the delicate muscles of the eyes. It causes too much blood to flow into the parts. It lays the foundation for serious disease of the eyes. Without enlarging upon this phase of the question, let me leave with you the thought that you are incompetent to judge whether or not your eyes are normal. It is only by a careful test by one who has scientific training that the true condition of your eyes can be determined.

Causes "Nervous Indigestion"

This is the reason why many persons have headaches and backaches and the symptoms of what is called "nervous indigestion." Nature resents such improper demands upon her. It stands to reason that if you use up your nervous energy in order to see perfectly, you have not left enough nervous energy to carry on the other functions of the body.

If time permitted, I could say a lot more about the relationship of eyestrain to general ill health. I hope I have said enough to make it clear to you that you can ill afford to neglect periodical examinations of the eyes. We are constantly preaching the importance of periodical general examinations. No such examination is complete unless the eyes have been tested.

At the Circleville Theatres

AT THE CLIFTONA

You find many things to fret about—real and imaginary things you just can't get your minds away from. But there's a picture on the way which will make you fretless for one evening at least. It is "Penrod and Sam," the First National production, featuring

Leon Janney and Junior Coghlan, and coming to the Cliftona tomorrow and Wednesday.

"Penrod and Sam" is a clever picturization of the adventures of Booth Tarkington's immortal Penrod Schofield and Sam Bassett—and their freckle-faced, stubby-toed gang, not forgetting Herman and Verman, the pickaninnies—and the funny old mutt, Duke. You really owe it to yourself and your family to take them all to the Cliftona Theatre to see "Penrod and Sam."

AT THE GRAND

Constance Bennett is a glamorous person. And the role she portrays in the RKO Pathe picture, "The Common Law," which opened last night at the Grand Theatre, is particularly suited to her beauty and talent.

The story is about an artists' model with advanced ideas of love—and the man she loves who is modern in everything but love.

The art studio scenes are particularly well done, and the scene representing the Parisian "Four Arts Ball" with its gorgeously costumed women stands out as a piece of masterful direction. Henry Clive, famous painter and illustrator, acted as technical director for these Parisian scenes. He had to conduct a real beauty contest in order to make a suitable selection of beautiful girls for the scene.

Miss Bennett has an excellent supporting cast — Joel McCrea, Lew Cody, Robert Williams, Hedda Hopper, Marion Shilling, and Paul Ellis.

Paul Stein directed. The screen play was adapted from Robert W. Chambers' novel, "The Common Law," by John Farrow.

HAVE STYLES IN NATION CHANGED?

Fifty years ago women wore hoopskirts, bustles, petticoats, corsets, cotton stockins, high buttoned shoes, ruffled cotton drawers, flannel night gowns, puffs in their hair—did their own cooking, baking, cleaning, washing, ironing, raised big families—went to church Sunday—were too busy to be sick.

Men wore whiskers, square hats, Ascot ties, red flannel underwear, big watches and chains, chopped wood for stoves, bathed once a week, drank ten cent whiskey and five cent beer, rode bicycles, buggies or sleighs, went in for politics, worked 12 hours a day, and lived to a ripe old age.

Stores burned coal, oil lamps, carried everything from a needle to a plow, trusted everybody, never took an inventory, placed orders for goods a year in advance, always made money.

Today women wear silk stockings, short skirts, low shoes, no corsets, an ounce of underwear, have bobbed hair, smoke, paint and powder, drink cocktails, play bridge, drive cars, have pet dogs and go in for politics.

Men have high blood pressure, wear no hats, shave their whiskers, shoot golf, bathe twice a day, drink poison, play the stock market, ride in airplanes, never go to bed the day they get up, are misunderstood at home, work five hours a day—play ten—die young.

Stores have electric lights, cash registers, never have what the customer wants, trust nobody, take inventory daily, never buy in advance, have overhead-mark-up-mark-down-quota-budget-advertising-stock-control-annual and semi-annual, end of month, dollar day, founder's day, rummage, economy day sales, and never make any money.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

RAGING MR. REINHART

The Columbus Dispatch of Friday evening carries an explanation but a very poor excuse for the dismissal of seven Game Protectors in that many counties—judging from the flood of protests sent to the Governor and the Conservation Department by farmers, sportsmen and business men. Irrespective of political beliefs or political party, Mr. Reinhart certainly owes the public far more than a weak explanation. Not one of the counties where a dismissal occurred had more than one Game Protector and a salary basis so his idea of economy especially while working with the sportsmen's money differs from the opinion in general of the men who purchase a license to fish and hut.

Quoting Mr. Reinhart, the Dispatch says "The Sportsmen of Ohio have a right to expect 100 cents for every dollar they pay for fish and game propagation and conservation and as long as I am head of the division they will get it." Pickaway-co public opinion finds this very hard to believe judging from his recent actions. This county is now without a paid Game Protector. For the past several months we have had results in the field and stream which was exceptionally fine for the sportsmen, but during the week following the dismissal of this county's Game Protector the violators have been hard at it all of which can be laid directly upon the Commissioner and he must bear the blame.

Any man who calls himself a true sportsman will place true conservation away above Mr. Reinhart's small ideas and actions and obey the laws of conservation and protection for the sake of his brother sportsman and the farmer. He will be especially careful this year because 1932 will without a doubt bring conservation out of politics and place it back in the hands of farmers and sportsmen of Ohio. This movement is well on its way and a solemn promise has been delivered to the public, so far the remainder of this year, and 1932 the good old red blood of the sportsman will show up as never before.

Fesler Says

Gillman's score, after he caught a partially deflected pass, may have been a lucky one, but he didn't let any grass grow under his feet, and his 25-yard jaunt to the goal line was good football because he had to elude two would-be tacklers.

No one can say that blocking a punt is a lucky break. Good, hard aggressive football results in blocked punts, and that is how Ohio scored its second touchdown. Haubrich went through fast and blocked the punt. Junie Ferrall also made an attempt to block the kick but kept his feet and was in fine position to pick up the ball. Scoring from a blocked kick is good football and not a lucky break.

STRUCK PASSER

The third and last score came when Ferrall intercepted a Navy pass and ran about 25 yards. The Bucks made their own break here, too. I'm sure that everybody noticed the Ohio right end and tackle break through to hurry the passer and hit him a fraction of a second before he threw the ball. This, of course, caused the ball to go on another than its intended course, and what happened then is well known.

Although they did not play the football of which they are capable, the Buckeyes are a better eleven than the Navy.

With the Navy gone now, Ohio must prepare for two remaining conference battles which mean much to Ohio's standing. Should Ohio beat Illinois and Wisconsin, it will be assured of a tie for second place in the standing.

When Interest Is Low

Probably the great majority of unthinking business men believe that interest is low when money is plentiful, and high when money is scarce. This view, however, is fallacious, and the fallacy consists in forgetting that plentiful money ultimately raises the demand for loans just as much as it raises the supply, and therefore has just as much tendency to raise interest as to lower it.

Statuary Hall

In 1864, at the suggestion of Senator Morrill of Vermont (then a member of the house) the room which had formerly been known as the hall of representatives was set apart as a national statuary hall, to which each state might send statues of two of its distinguished citizens. Rhode Island was the first to respond, choosing Roger Williams and Nathanael Greene, and more than half of the states have contributed one or two statues.

It Must Be Won

Lo, I tell you, there is nothing worth the winning that must not be won; and this also: he who hath the secret hath it by his own worth, and that proved. —Tsiang Sumdup.

Looking to Things

When you take successful business men apart you find that mentally, they are in no way superior to the men who work for them What put them on top was their point of view.—American Magazine.

"Uncle Tom"

Mrs Stowe said that her first conception of the character of "Uncle Tom" came from writing letters for her colored cook in Ohio to the husband, a slave in Kentucky. Afterward, she used some incidents from the autobiography of Josiah Henson. The character of Uncle Tom, therefore, was a fictitious one, imbued with traits which Mrs. Stowe saw in him. The death of Uncle Tom was her own invention.

Pyre of 5 in Air Crash

Twisted, seared wreckage—all that was left of a speedy Lockheed-Sirius New York-to-Washington airliner which crashed at Camden, N. J., and burned, carrying its veteran pilot, Floyd Cox (inset) and four others to their death. Witnesses saw the huge transport plane rapidly lose altitude and finally dive to its fate. The bodies could not be dragged from the smoldering ruins until firemen had drenched the flaming wreckage.

Chief Justice Hughes In Tribute to Red Cross

One of the finest tributes ever paid the American Red Cross and its membership was that by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States Supreme Court, on the occasion of the fiftieth birthday anniversary of the organization on May 21 of this year. Mr. Hughes said:

"The American Red Cross represents the united voluntary effort of the American people in the ministry of mercy. It is the finest and most effective expression of the American heart. It knows no partisanship. In the perfection of its cooperation, there is no blemish of distinctions by reason of race or creed or political philosophy.

"However we may differ in all things else, in the activities of the Red Cross we are a united people. None of our boasted industrial enterprises surpasses it in efficiency . . . It moves with the precision and the discipline of an army to achieve the noblest of human aims.

"The American Red Cross is not only first in war but first in peace The American people rely upon its ministrations in every great catastrophe. It has given its aid in over one thousand disasters. When, as we hope, war will be no more, still the Red Cross, in the countless activities of relief and rehabilitation, will continue to function as the organized compassion of our country."

Aid for War Veterans

More than 430,000 ex service men and their families were aided through 3,003 Red Cross Chapters and the national organization during the year ending June 30, 1931. Dependent families were cared for, veterans' claims were filed, hospitalization obtained and many other services given. Part of each contribution during the American Red Cross annual roll call, Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, goes toward supporting this vital work for veterans of the World War and other wars in which the United States has engaged.

Red Cross Life Savers

The right to wear the red and white insignia of the American Red Cross Life Saving service has been earned by 305,895 persons who have been graduated in the organization's expert life saving classes.

French Decoration

The fourragere, a French military decoration consisting of looped cords worn on the left shoulder of the uniform, is presented to a unit of troops for distinguished war service, and is worn by all the men of the troop and carried on the colors.

Character vs. Desire

Each month after paying your fixed expenses, you probably have a few dollars remaining. These dollars tell an important story. What you do with them might well indicate the difference between a potentially successful man and an improvident fellow who is always "waiting for the breaks."

Regular saving is a matter of character and management, not of income.

Regular spending is a matter of satisfying your desires.

Inject into your program a sensible portion of each by adding to your fixed expense a reasonable sum to be accumulated over the years. We pay 5% —TAX PAID.
